THE RISE AND FALL OF THE NIA

28

COVER STORY / CRIME

28

Falling in Line

The National Investigation Agency's loss of credibility

NILEENA MS

The National Investigation Agency was founded in 2008. In an environment of declining professional standards among the country's many investigative agencies, some of the NIA's early work was marked by a rare hard-nosed competence. Under the Narendra Modi government, however, the agency's early promise and political neutrality has withered away. India's "most professional investigative agency," formed to deal with terrorism alone, has morphed into one that is sent after inter-religious couples, human-rights lawyers and octogenarian priests. Its handling of the Bhima Koregaon case reveals many of the illegalities it once accused other agencies of. The story of the NIA illustrates how quickly professionalism can be sacrificed at the altar of political manoeuvring. The clearest demonstration of this is in the about-turns it made in the investigations into the Samjhauta and Malegaon bombings, where evidence pointed squarely towards Hindu extremists.
