Infirm Logic

How the SIT report gave the Modi government a free pass on the 2002 Gujarat violence

HARTOSH SINGH BAL

A recent Supreme Court judgement dismissed charges of criminal conspiracy against Prime Minister Narendra Modi and others in relation to the 2002 Gujarat violence. To arrive at this conclusion, it relied extensively on a closure report submitted by a special investigation team in 2012. A close study of the report, however, shows that the SIT, time and again, attempted to dilute the seriousness of the evidence it collected. This ranges from Modi being allowed to get away with meaningless clarifications about provocative statements he made to dismissing the transfer of good officers who contained the violence as simply a matter of government prerogative. Such reasoning makes little sense in a case where the government itself is the accused. Still harder to accept is the argument that the disproportionate number of Muslim casualties in police firing was a matter of chance. All of this raises questions about the investigation's methodology, which repeatedly undercuts the evidence the SIT has marshalled and reaches conclusions that defy logic.

RESEARCH

- Exploring Relationship Between Workplace Bullying and Healthcare Organization's Well-being: Mechanism of Psychological Contract Violation and Forgiveness 79
Ritika Sharma and Asha Prasad

The article is an investigative study drawn on the grounded theory approach, envisaging the relation between workplace bullying and employee behavioural outcomes among resident doctors in Indian Healthcare organisations. Using an interpretative paradigm, the authors explored underlying psychological mechanisms among 48 participant doctors in light of 'India's unique culture. Findings suggest that the prevalence of bullying in Indian healthcare organisations impacts employee behavioural outcomes emerging as a major challenge in healthcare management. Drawing on conservation of resources theory, forgiveness emerged as a coping mechanism providing uniqueness to study. Theoretical and managerial implications are discussed.

- Gendered Impact of the COVID-19: Insights from an Interpretative Phenomenological Perspective 91
Supreet Kaur

Decades of research on gender inequalities and social inclusion have advocated for the empowerment of women and their inclusion in the mainstream. The positive correlation between women empowerment and economic growth has always been a major thrust of research. However, it is expected that the pandemic might roll back the limited gains made by women over the past few decades. The present study using the Interpretative Phenomenological Approach (IPA) explains the compounded impact of the COVID-19 in light of economic, social and psychological disruptions.

MANAGEMENT CASE

- Managing Adversity: Brands and COVID-19 106
Anirban Chakraborty and Swapan Deep Arora

The case captures the psychological impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the lockdown imposed to fight it. While adopting a broader crisis management perspective, it documents the individual and brand reactions in the initial days of this global pandemic. Employing COVID-19, the case illustrates how the brands, rooted in their understanding of the consumer, coupled with their brand values, draw upon the societal marketing concept and respond to a crisis.

Nag, Aasiya Tejani, Samana Tejani, Shubhika Sharma, and Divya Jain

Like never before the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted the plight of India's informal and migrant workers. This led to the genesis of the Social Compact. The Social Compact is a unique indigenously designed voluntary initiative to stimulate positive social change in Indian industry. It is a multi-stakeholder initiative that brings together Indian industry, civil society and academics to drive socially sustainable practices across the production value chains. The colloquium presents the necessity of a 'human-centric' approach to business and builds a case for why fair and equitable treatment of informal workers aids a business. Twelve articles from experts representing the industry, civil society, developmental organisations and academia explain the inception of the Social Compact and share the journey of various stakeholders from diverse sectors.
